WAGNER

By GEORGE FITCH

WAGNER

Regarding Wagner, America is divided into two classes—those who admire him for his harmonic originality and those who worship him for his home runs.

It will be a great shock to many of the latter class to learn that there are two immortal Wagners and that we propose to tell of Richard and not of Hans.

Wilhelm Richard Wagner was born in Leipzig, May 22, 1813, and was about 102 per cent German in family and feeling. It broke out in him early in life in the shape of an overture, which he produced at the age of 12. At 21 he was conducting a forty-piece orchestra and was writing scores which caused the oldest and most experienced flute-players to lay down their weapons and exclaim: "Donnerwetter und blitzen, was is los mit ihnen?"

In a few years more Wagner was so far advanced in music that he did not express merely love and sorrow in notes, but set mythology, jealousy, spring fever, growing grass and rain-storms to music. His first great work was Tannhauser, and after it was produced the audience sat, dazed and solemn for some time, picking strange harmonies out of their ears and examining them with much doubt. Wagner was an insurgent in music, politics, love and poetry, and after he had infuriated all the musical standpatters by writing pieces which made the most celebrated prima donnas stand around and help out the bull fiddles in the orchestral score, he insured against the government and was ejected from Germany with great emphasis in 1848.

For many years afterward Wagner lived in Paris and produced his great operas for the French, who cheerfully got up riot after riot in opposition to the diminished seventh and other musical heresies. When we realize how fiercely patriotic the French are regarding musical styles and how patiently they bear up under 60-cent beef and a tax on salt, we begin to realize what is the matter with the French census returns. Wagner remained in Paris twenty years, writing operas, each one of which demanded more muscle on the part of the kettle drums. In 1872, he returned to Germany and spent the rest of his life at Bayreuth, where he built his own theatre—an idea which has since been copied by Maxine Elliott, George Cohan, and other great artists.

Wagner's music was not understood while he lived and many people were severely jarred while trying to follow the melody which wandered in among countless modulations and crescendos. His music consists of a theme indefinitely repeated for four hours by one to 150 musicians armed with well-known instruments and some which Wagner invented to take up the slack in the disturbance. His music is an acquired taste, but millions of people are steadily acquiring it at from $2 to $8 a seat and in Germany it is a national dissipation. It can be fed to a well-built pianola with much success, and some of our most promising Olympic athletes train during the winter on "Tannhauser's" overture for the 88-note foot-power player.

all of the Indiana delegation, gives him 385 delegates upon the temporary roll to date.

All of the California delegates were at once placed upon the temporary roll, except those from the Second District.

Rumors that if defeated former President Roosevelt intends to bolt the convention and possibly run upon an independent ticket were emphatically denied by leading members of the Roosevelt faction here last night. They declared that the report was circulated to damage the Colonel.

Both Senator Cummins and Senator La Follette opened headquarters here last night and at once began to get down to hard work. Congressman Kenyon of Iowa raised the standard of Senator Cummins for President. He says a thousand boosters for Cummins are coming to the convention. Governor Johnson of California is coming East in response a hurry-up call of the Roosevelt men.

IRON RULE TO BREAK UP PLOT AT SAN QUENTIN

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., June 11.—Following an investigation and trial by penitentiary and State officials the ringleader in the bloody convict uprising here of last week has been sentenced to spend the remainder of his life-term in jail in solitary confinement and until his death will now meet no other persons besides his guards.

His accomplices, to the number of twenty-four, received milder sentences ranging from three to six months in solitary confinement, the prison authorities being determined to furnish a severe example to any convict conspirators in the future.

Lays Outbreak to Humanitarians.
SAN QUENTIN, Cal., June 11.—The situation at the State prison here is proving of more serious character than at first expected. The guards and authorities are afraid to turn the prisoners loose in the jute mill and as a result that part of the prison plant is closed.

Details of a huge plot to set fire to the mill yesterday came to the ears of Warden Hoyle, who at once took steps to punish the ringleaders. It was learned yesterday that the convicts were pounding upon the doors of the cupboard where the kitchen knives were kept when the guards turned the steam from the kitchen pipes upon the crowd, and drove it back into the mess-hall.

Warden Hoyle declares that he now has the situation pretty well in hand and does not anticipate any further trouble. He asserts that the cause of the outbreak is the propaganda which has been started and maintained by Fremont Older and others for a new parole law, which shall make it easier for prisoners to secure release upon parole. This agitation, he says, has stirred the prisoners up to demand easy parole laws and other changes in the existing system.

Riotous scenes followed and the police reserves had to be called out before quiet was restored. Several wagonloads of prisoners were taken to the station.

U. S. ARMY AVIATOR KILLED.
COLLEGE PARK, Md., June 11.—While making night tests in a Wright biplane as part of important experiments of the Army aviation arm, 2nd Lieutenant Leighton W. Hazelhurst, 17th United States Infantry, and a companion were killed here tonight.

Lieutenant Hazelhurst has been participating in the work of the Army aeronautical school, now engaged in testing aeroplane radio-telegraph equipment and was prominent in the experiments largely carried on in Burgess-Curtiss aeroplanes.

BIPLANE STARTLES PORTLAND.
PORTLAND, Ore., June 11.—Businessmen and pedestrians on the downtown streets of this city this afternoon were astonished by seeing a biplane rise from the ground, and ascending in a long plane, turn and set tle on the roof of a 10-story hotel. The air-machine was piloted by an amateur named Christoffersen, the feat of rising from a street and landing on such a precarious base being considered a novel one in aviation.

The Portuguese Sunday school picnic at the peninsula pavilion yesterday was attended by such a crowd that four large passenger coaches were required by the O. R. & L. to take the people down and back. The outdoor sports were greatly enjoyed. Rev. Mr. Soares and T. H. R. Vierra were in general charge.
